STAT

Reference your letter of 9 January, I have personally reviewed the circumstances in connection with your employment by this Agency and find --

That you were employed on a temporary basis for unclassified work pending completion of the detailed examination to be made of your background and previous experience.

That as a result of this examination it was determined you do not meet the standards required of permanent employees of the Agency.

That after receiving your termination notice you expressed a desire to resign, upon which the termination notice was withdrawn.

That you submitted your written resignation effective 7 January 1949, which has been accepted as of that date.

Our employment standards are necessarily very high and include a number of factors other than loyalty, all of which are carefully considered in making final determinations relative to permanent employment.

If you will contact my office [redacted] an interview will be arranged for you. However, in view of the determination previously made and the acceptance of your voluntary resignation, we cannot consider the question of your reemployment by CIA.
